

My Father's Job

My father is a shop owner. He sells glasses, provides eye tests for customers and gives them advice on choosing the best glasses.

He has good communication skills because he explains the eye problems that the customers have well. He is also helpful because he always tries his best to meet the needs of his customers. He also makes his customers feel welcome by being polite.

I think being an optical shop owner is meaningful because he provides a service to help people improve their eyesight. It is challenging because he helps his customers until they feel satisfied.

I admire my father because he is passionate about his job!
